Litigation is anticipated over a

$8,000 policy in the Royal Arcanum held by the late Robert C. Greenland. Mrs. Elizabeth Greenland, the widow through her attorney, P. S. Newmyer, has served notice on the organization not to pay the face of the policy to Mrs. Jennie B. Skinner, named as beneficiary by her brother.

Mr. Newmyer has stated that efforts will be made to reach an amicable settlement of the matter without recourse to law, but when seen in regard to the matter Mrs. Skinner declared that the claim of Mrs. Greenland is not warranted by the facts and that the "Globe" is

It is alleged, says Mr. Newmyer, that Mr. Greenland was of unsound mind 10 months ago when he made his sister the beneficiary instead of his wife, and that undue influence was exercised

These allegations are denied by Mrs. Skinner. She claims that Mrs. Greenland has no claim whatever to the insurance; that Mr. Greenland was of sound mind when he made her his beneficiary and that he did it of his own will and without any

When seen at her home Mrs. Skinner expressed regret any trouble has been threatened over the matter. "No sister ever cared for a brother more than I did for Bob," she said. "No sister was ever more attentive. He made his home here with me almost

"During his declining months he frequently said to me: 'Jennie, I want you to have the insurance money when I go. I've never been able to give you anything, but I can repay your kindness that way.'"

Mrs. Skinner said that toward the last, payments were not kept up on the policy, and that Secretary E. G.

Hall, of the Royal Arcanum, notified Mrs. Greenland that if she desired to have the policy continue in force she would have to pay the back dues. Mrs. Greenland refused to meet the expense, Mrs. Skinner says, and then she agreed to her brother's plan, paying the premiums and permitting her

Mrs. Skinner says that she bears nothing but the kindest of feelings toward her sister-in-law. The latter was in Connellsville on two occasions during the past year and visited the Skinner home both times.

Mr. and Mrs. Greenland had not resided together for many years previous to the former's death. It is asserted by friends of the widow that they were on the best of terms. More than a score of years ago the pair left Connellsville, going to Washington where they made their home. Mr.

Greenland was unable to succeed in business there, and returned to Connellsville, although Mrs. Greenland had secured a position in the general land office of the Department of the Interior. She has retained her position since then, and has always objected to moving to Connellsville. The

Mr. Greenland was one of the best known men in town. He was the first to open a plumbing shop here, having conducted a business at the corner of Pittsburg and Apple streets, where the McGowan water pump is still to be seen.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

MOUNT PLEASANT, May 9.—The Mount Pleasant police officers, Chief Robert Smith and Harry Hostettler, are being complimented over their catching the man who shot Joseph Keiser of Scottsdale on Tuesday night. Chief of Police Smith talks Slavish, and while standing at the East End of town on Wednesday evening the accused man came up to Smith and asked where he could get a car in Tarr. Smith had just seen a photograph of the man supposed to be the murderer and looking this man over thought he was the man he wanted. Smith turned away to talk to some one else, the man started running down the street car track. Just then a Tarr car came in and Patrolman Hostettler was made acquainted with the facts, and both officers started in pursuit, overtaking the man near Bridgeport. Smith took one arm and Hostettler the other. There was a loaded revolver in the sleeve of the arm Hostettler grabbed. He was taken to the lockup and yesterday morning said he couldn't talk English, so Chief Smith acted as interpreter. The man at first stated he was from Greensburg and finally Pittsburg. He gave an assumed name and said he hadn't been at Scottsdale for a long time. When Collins asked where he worked he said pipe mill. After the examination the man was taken to Scottsdale by the state police.

BACKACHE IS A DANGER SIGNAL

Kidney Troubles, Bladder Disorders, Rheumatism, and Serious Diseases Follow.

There are other symptoms, such as pains in the region of the kidneys, nervousness, dizziness, tired and worn-out feeling, weak bladder, painful, scanty, or urinary troubles, which are just as dangerous, for the slightest kidney derangement if neglected may develop into the deadly Bright's Disease, Dropsy, or Diabetes.

It is not only dangerous, but needless, for you to suffer, and endure the tortures of these troubles, for the new discovery, Croxone, quickly and surely ends all such misery.

There is no more effective remedy known for the cure of kidney, bladder trouble, and rheumatism, than this new scientific preparation, because it removes the cause. It soaks right into the kidneys, through the walls and linings, cleans out the clogged-up pores, neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid and waste matter, that lodge in the joints and muscles and cause those terrible rheumatic pains, and makes the kidneys filter the poison from the blood and drive it out of the system.

Three doses of Croxone a day, for a few days is often all that is ever needed to cure the worst backache or overcome disagreeable urinary disorders, and you can take it with the utmost confidence that nothing on earth will so quickly cure the worst case of kidney, bladder trouble, or rheumatism.

You will find Croxone different from all other remedies. There is nothing else like it. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results. An original package costs but a trifle at any first class drug store. All druggists are authorized to personally return the purchase price if Croxone should fail in a single case.—Advertisement.

MOTHERS! HERE'S SOMETHING NEW FOR COUGHS AND COLD TROUBLES

An External Treatment That Does Away With Internal Medicines, Chest Protectors, Etc.—You Can Let the Children Run Outdoors in All Weathers and Get Their Needed Fresh Air and Exercise.

Every month is the doctor when it comes to treating the annoying little cold troubles that all children are heir to. The only trouble is to know what really is the best thing to do.

Some mothers keep the children indoors and make them wear chest protectors and heavy flannels. This method deprives the children of the fresh air and exercise they need and the heavy clothing keeps the pores of the skin open and really makes them catch cold more easily.

A few mothers neglect these troubles entirely and this often leads, in after life, to chronic catarrh, weakened lungs, etc.

Most mothers keep on hand a formidable array of bottles and usually dosing one or more of the children. This method is probably worse than the others as most cough medicines contain alcohol and some form of opium and are very injurious to the delicate stomachs of the little folks.

After all, colds are simply inflammations of the lining of the air passages just like sunburn and mosquito bites are inflammation of the skin. We don't dose the stomach to cure sunburn, but we have to dose the stomach for colds because there has been no way of applying a direct application to the air passages except in the form of vapors. And while the old vapor lamps gave off the needed vapors, they required the room to be kept closed and hence kept out the all important fresh air.

Pine tar from the south, menthol from Japan, camphor from the Isle of Formosa, and the oils of Thymol, eucalyptol, cubeb and Juniper, are recognized as the best remedies for cold troubles. Druggists the world over have been seeking some cheap, convenient method of vaporizing these products without having to use the cumbersome vapor lamp.

A druggist in North Carolina discovered how to combine these products in a salve by a special process so that they were vaporized by the heat of the body when applied over the throat and chest. This patented process is the only secret about this new treatment which is known as Vicks Vapo-Rub and Pneumonia Salve.

Plenty of fresh air in the bedroom and a little Vicks used occasionally will keep the children free from cold troubles, no matter how much they are exposed. Croup really is relieved in 15 minutes. For all inflammations of the air passages such as catarrh, bronchitis, tonsillitis, asthma, etc., this new treatment will be found remarkably successful. Simply apply Vicks well over throat and chest and cover with a warm flannel cloth. Leave the covering loose around the neck so the vapors arising may be freely inhaled.

All the leading drug stores in Connelville are now agencies for the sale of this preparation and are giving with each sale a refund slip that is good for your money back if Vicks is not found to be far better than internal medicines.

Vicks comes in three sizes—25c, 50c and $1.00. The price is never cut.—Advertisement.

Do You Need Assistance

IN THE SELECTION OF YOUR WALL PAPER?

There is a logical sequence governed largely by the existing conditions in your home which if followed will produce correct results. Each room should be treated so as to give it correct form and proportions.

Then there is the question of color and design which must suit the individualities of each room as well as harmonize with the adjoining rooms. Especially is this true of parlors, dining room and reception hall or any group of rooms when considered collectively.

I can render you valuable assistance in the selection of your Wall Papers.

HAVE YOU CATARRH?

Hymel Medals—the Air You Breathe and Give Quick Relief in Catarrhal Troubles.

Be wise in time and use Hymel at the first warning of catarrhal troubles. Do not let the disease extend along the delicate mucous membrane, gradually eating from the nose to the throat, thence into the bronchial tubes and then downward until the lungs are reached and you are in danger of consumption.

Hymel will relieve all curable forms and stages of catarrh. It is so uniformly successful in this common yet dangerous disease that it is always sold on money back if not beneficial plan.

There is no other treatment for catarrh that is like Hymel or just as good. None can take its place none give such quick and sure relief and at so little cost. Its medicinal is breathed through a pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, thus reaching the most remote cells of the air passages, killing the catarrhal germs and soothing and healing the irritated mucous membrane.

Again the use of Hymel today and you will soon find that the offensive breath the drooping into the throat the discharge from the nose, swelling and all other symptoms of catarrh are overcome. The complete outfit costs but $1.00. Extra bottles of liquid, if later needed, 50 cents at A. A. Clarke and druggists everywhere—Advertisement.

The Gold Dust Twins' Philosophy

ONE day, when Mr. Jones returned with what his weekly toil had earned, he found his little wife in tears and mood not suited to her years. It seemed the cook had bade "adieu," likewise the washerwoman, too.

At first within the House of Jones there followed sad despondent moans. No hopeful word could reconcile, no homied kiss inspire a smile. "I never knew before," said she, "how horrid household cares could be."

"Upon my word I'm up at six and working still as midnight ticks. I scrub and run and wash and shine to keep the little things in line, and yet around me here and there I see undone another share. I almost feel as if I'd like to join the other ones on Strike. Some morning try it—get a mop; go through from cellar to the top, and I will venture you must see, the greater burdens fall on me."

Now Mr. Jones was passing wise and later, sprang a glad surprise. Through friends who praised the "GOLD DUST WAY," he brought a package home one day.

From tears to sunshine, Wife now has found the good of "Knowing How" and striking servants fail to stir, the placid calm content of her.

WEST PENN EXPERT TELLS OF FIGHT TO ELECTRIFY MINES

Central Power Station Installation Long Met Opposition.

J. S. JENKS REVIEWS PROGRESS

In Paper Before Electrical Engineers He Describes History of West Penn as a Power Factor in the Coke Region; Some Early Installations.

An interesting story of the West Penn's invasion of the power field in the Connellsville coke region is told in the paper presented by Assistant General Manager J. S. Jenks, which was read before the Pittsburgh meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers on April 18. Mr. Jenks said:

The subject of this meeting covers such a broad field that it would be folly to undertake to cover more than a limited portion of any particular branch; hence I will deal only with the historical side of the question as it has to do with the development of central station service in connection with coal mining on the West Penn system.

Central station power for mine service has been greatly handicapped by the prejudice of some mining engineers and mine inspectors who have actually fought the installation of central station power, stating that central station service was not as reliable as an isolated plant, was more dangerous on account of the high voltage and more costly. They often eliminated all cost of plant labor and fuel when making comparisons between central station service and isolated plants, arguing that the plant labor would have to be paid the mine at any rate, and that the cost of fuel was equal to the mining company that it should not be considered.

In order to overcome these objections it was necessary to prove the reliability of central station service and its advantages. The objection of the mine inspectors was the hardest to overcome. Even after the mine operators were convinced that central station service was more economical and were in favor of installing it, the mine inspectors frequently prohibited central station service for some reason in and about the mines, particularly for fan service.

They argued that transmission and distributing lines, of necessity, made central station service liable to accidents and acts of God beyond the control of man, contending that installation of such equipment that no mining company should be dependent on another corporation for its power for fan operation. It was only after years of successful operation of all other classes of mine service that we were able to overcome this prejudice and succeed in getting the mine inspectors to approve central station service for fans, much less recommend it.

The mining engineer and the electrical employee, opposed central station service for obvious reasons, one of which, frequently frankly admitted, was that with central station service there would be no job. The truth of the matter has been that central station service has actually enlarged their field of labor, as more mines are being electrified every day on account of the many advantages of central station service, thus requiring the services of an engineer and electrician to most efficiently install and operate central power stations. High grade engineering and labor pays such great returns on the investment that the demand for first class men is constantly increasing. While on the other hand it is an admitted fact that almost any mine foreman or master mechanic could install and operate a steam-driven or a direct current isolated plant, the very frequent, often actually costing many times what it was supposed to. The lack of electrical engineering in the early days of central station service was a large factor in retarding its growth as well as being shown by the initial installation in this territory.

The first installation of central station service in a mine on the West Penn system was made at the Larimer mine of the Westmoreland Coal Company in 1896. It consisted of a 120 horse power, 1,000 volt, three phase, 133-cycle induction type synchronous motor belted to 100 kw, 500-volt, motor which actuated through shifting belts. The switchboard was located in an underground sub-station as it was feared it might be damaged by employees during strike periods if it were above ground.

In order to supply this service there was installed at the power house of the Irwin Electric Light and Power Company at Manor one 150-kw, single phase, 2,000-volt, 133-cycle alternator and 125-kw, 2,200 to 4,400-volt, 60-cycle transformer for raising the generator voltage to the transmission and motor voltage.

The apparatus supplied from this sub-station consisted of six mining machines, a 10-horsepower pump and a 50-horse power haulage, but no fan service was supplied for reasons already explained.

The first trouble that developed was the "falling in" of the roof of the sub-station, which not only damaged the apparatus, but put the mine out of service for some time until the debris could be removed and a brick lining put in to prevent a recurrence of similar trouble. This brick lining sweated so that it made all the apparatus wet, which resulted in frequent burn-outs of the starting motor, which stood idle for long periods. In order to improve the situation, duplicate starting motors were provided and at times it was a problem to keep one in condition for service. The difficulty of sweating was partially overcome by putting a wooden lining inside the brickwork.

The next difficulty arose from a breakdown in the lead cable caused by lightning. This had the effect of charging everything in the sub-station. It was overcome by removing the lead from the cable and supporting it on glass insulators, except where it passed through the bore hole.

The next weakness developed in this oil switch. This two-pole switch had eight breakers and was contained in a tank 8 by 14 by 9 inches and operated by hand and pinion, which worked on a rack pulling the rods out of the bushings. This made a very slow operating switch with which it was very difficult to synchronize. After numerous interruptions caused by failures of this switch, a makeshift switch consisting of an ordinary two-pole, two-break, knife switch on a marble base was mounted on insulators in the bottom of a half barrel. This switch hardly was connected and a broadcloth tied to the cross bar with a belt. Leads were brought over the edge of the barrel and connected to the switch. The barrel was filled with oil. The switch was used until it was finally abandoned on account of the mine being worked out.

The Irwin Electric Light & Power Company was acquired by the West Penn interests and in 1905 the 133-cycle power house at Manor was established and service established from a 60-cycle turbine station at Connellsville three and one-half miles of 22,000-volt transmission lines and a substation at Manor. This necessitated the reconstruction of the motor from 133 to 60 cycles. This work on the large motor was done in the field and the starting motors were sent to the factory one at a time. This reconstruction had the effect of reducing the capacity of the motor and resulting in a decrease in the speed of the starting motors making it necessary to provide larger motors.

The next trouble to develop was rather peculiar in that the large motor started to drop out of its belt without apparent cause and would drop out when hauling practically no load. This was a very puzzling circumstance and no amount of adjusting by attendants seemed to remedy the trouble. It was found, however, when the supply from Connellsville was generated by a single unit that this trouble was most pronounced and later discovered that there was a splice in the belt between the motor and generator that caused little jerks which would get in step with the governor mechanism on the turbine, causing the turbine to hunt. This hunting it dropped out of step. The remedy for this trouble consisted in direct-connecting the motor and generator, which happened to be the same speed. On account of the high voltage of the motor it was necessary to have the motor frame insulated and satisfactory insulating coupling became the question. This was solved by turning the shafts end to end, setting the pulleys about six inches apart, drilling and tapering the rim of the pulleys for cap screws and laying a piece of belt around inside of both pulley rims and securing it in place with cap screws. This proved a very satisfactory flexible insulating coupling, which gave no trouble and operated for a number of years until the mine was worked out.

Notwithstanding these difficulties encountered, this installation proved a very satisfactory one to the mining company, saving them a considerable amount of money, even though the rate charged was several times greater than the charge for similar service today, and it led to many other large installations.

The first mine where West Penn service was used for fan operation was at the Penn Gas Coal Company's mine near Penn Station and consisted of a 100-horsepower, 500-volt direct current motor, belted to the fan. This was installed about 1901 when the mine was completely electrified direct current. The installation consisted of numerous pumps, mine machinery and a large haulage. The fan operated until 1907 when the motor was replaced by a 200-horsepower alternating current, two-phase, 60-cycle motor. This installation, which originally consisted of about 500 horsepower, has been increased from time to time until it now has about 1,250 horsepower in electric motors.

In 1907 our first high-tension installation was made at a coal mine. This was made at the Naomi mine of the United Coal Company, near Fayette City. In this case the coal company built its own sub-station and bought current at 2,000 volts, installing three 200-kilowatt, 22,000 to 440-volt transformers, one 300- and one 150-kilowatt synchronous motor-generator sets, one 150 horsepower alternating current, 200 volt, power chain lift, two 75 horsepower fan motors, alternating current pumps and numerous haulage locomotives and mining machines. This installation was of particular interest as it was the first where engineering had very careful consideration and was our first alternating current haulage.

A coal mine installation where the most minute detail was worked out by the engineers in charge with the idea of producing the most efficient result is illustrated by the Keystone Coal Company's installation at its Crow's Nest sub-station. Here 1,500 horsepower is delivered at 2,300 volts from 22,000-volt transformers installed in the sub-station, together with the necessary switches and lighting protection. This installation consists of 750 horsepower alternating current haulage, two 300-kilowatt synchronous motor-generator sets, two 150-horsepower alternating current pumps and numerous locomotives, mining machines and small motors.

At the present time we have in operation 75 coal mines consisting of 11,531 horsepower and have contracts with 10 companies which aggregate 5,741 horsepower, which is being installed rapidly as possible. This will make a total of 20,532 horsepower. In addition to this we are at present time figuring with a number of coal companies and have every reason to believe that in a short time we will have under contract more than 10,000 horsepower additional, which will increase our total to over 30,000 horsepower and no amount of adjusting power in coal mine service only.

THE COAL TRADE

Only Moderate Buying in the East but Lulls Business Booms.

The bluntness coal situation is generally satisfactory, especially in the Pittsburgh district, which is profiting by the almost unprecedented demand for Loko coal. It is predicted that all previous records will be smashed in Loko shipments during the present season, despite an adverse start because of transportation delays, due principally to the floods.

The eastern market has been far from good, but a labor shortage is having a steady effect in this direction, together with the uncertainty prevailing in the West Virginia field. The coal trade is light, but export business has taken a sudden turn for the better.

Down in Kentucky a shortage of cars is reported. Contracting has been unusually active, with both consumers and producers apparently satisfied. Pittsburgh mine-run prices have advanced 10 cents to 1.50 and the majority of companies are sold up for the season.

The DAUGHTER of DAVID KERR

By Harry King Tootle

Illustrations by Ray Wallace

Copyright, 1913, by Harry King Tootle

Gloria felt herself fascinated by this slight little woman who in her excitement had propped herself up in bed on a thin, trembling arm. The light had come back into her eyes as she pursued her inquiries and they shone like two burning coals.

"He didn't really love me," Gloria said more to herself than to the girl. "Did he tell you so? How do you know?" "Then was he a liar?" "Huh! You asked me questions so I thought I'd ask you some. Did he know you loved him?"

"He did, but—my father discovered that he was unworthy." This information seemed to Little Ella to be a bond of fellowship. She fell back on the bed to rest, and remarked philosophically:

"Humph! My old man thought the fellow I loved was no good, too. Guess we've had pretty hard times, eh?" "No reply, 'What if you think?'"

"I—I—he was unworthy."

It was now Gloria who spoke listlessly.

"So you had to choose between 'im and yer father?"

"Was there any choice? I gave him up."

"I left home. So, you see, I've loved more'n you've ever loved," she cried. "You didn't really love," she spoke, "I've gone through fire an' storm fer the man I loved, because I loved a real man. You must 'a' loved some kid at the ribbon counter. A real man wouldn't 'a' let you give him up."

"This was a tribute to the almost perfection of the graceful young creature before her. The sight of Gloria as something to be desired, to be possessed, made Little Ella feel that no man with red blood in his veins would give her up without a fight. She hated her for her meanness of beautiful hair, her deep, soulful eyes, her complexion of apple blossom, and her delicate white hands. She hated her for her evolute, girlish figure and her beautiful clothes which brought out her best lines. A woman may be down in the world, but she has eyes to see."

"Look at me," she cried, beating her flat breasts with her red, bony hands. "A man died for me—an' he thought I was worth it. Did you love a man well enough for him to do that ter you?"

Gloria could only avoid the question by tactfully referring to Little Ella's present state.

"You don't know what you're saying. Can't you see what he's brought you to?"

"Don't you say a word against him," snapped the sick woman. "All men ain't alike, neither. It wasn't his fault 'im here. It's the system."

"The system! What's that?"

Here was the introduction of a new element. Gloria's curiosity was aroused. There was something luxurious about it, to judge from Little Ella's manner of speaking.

"Well, call it society, if you want to," conceded society's victim.

"What do you mean?"

"Say, are you stringin' me, or was you born yesterday?"

She laughed harshly at the humor of such a question.

"I don't understand," was all Gloria could reply.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Gloria had not been reared without an understanding of the various layers of society. Of those close to her own station in life she had an intimate and intelligent knowledge, but as she went down the scale her acquaintance grew slighter and her understanding more vague. Her poor creatures whom as a class Little Ella now represented to her were almost as foreign and as misunderstood as would be a lama of Tibet. Having no knowledge, she could have no real pity.

Gloria had never dreamed, even when she tried to put the worst of this construction on what few things she knew, that the world could be so cruel. Never for an instant had she thought that it was possible for men whom she regarded as upright and honorable to be engaged directly or indirectly in exploiting vice and ignorance. It had never occurred to her that men whom she might know, some of them owned dreary blocks of hovels and tenements from which high rents were secured only because the people who lived in them were not respectable. Poor and honest tenants could have paid but poor and precarious rents.

As little Ella told her story of the "system" at Gloria's request, her voice grew shriller and shriller as the indignation grew graver. She talked rapidly, sometimes turning aside from the direct channel of her revelation, to explore some little eddy of a special instance which made her account a reality. Gloria could have credited something to exaggeration had it not been that just at the moment she thought the girl was beginning to draw on her imagination suddenly, incident would be introduced suddenly to make the whole thing ghastly real.

For the first time the daughter of David Kerr learned of the puddlers of showy dresses, the vendors of cheap perfume, the stealthy disseminators of cocaine, and the many other leeches that fatten on the unfortunate of the underworld. She learned that all this misery was but a monument to human greed. Nothing was exploited in which there was not a profit of three or four hundred per cent. Nothing was exploited which did not tend to kill the finer feelings, reducing the poor victims in time to the level of brutes.

"And the men down here," Little Ella cried, the memory of the good, wholesome men whom she had known in her earlier life coming back to smite her, "poor ignorant excuses for men, most of 'em—all they're good for is to steal an' live off us women, an' vote the way the boss tells 'em on Election day. An' who's responsible fer that? Say!" Gloria could make no reply, and Ella, whose pause had been rhetorical, uncouth as she was, made answer herself. "I know. The fine gentleman what buys the votes. An' when they needs more money for more votes they send the 'plice 'round, an' us poor girls has to pay, always pay."

"I never dreamed of such a thing."

"I tol' you you didn't know. Why, once I was good like you, too. An' now," she began to sob—"now—I'm down—an' I can't get up. I can't get up. It's too late."

Suddenly Gloria remembered the power to which she would appeal. Where a minute before had been darkness and uncertainty was now the clearness of a summer day.

"It's never too late," she faltered. "Remember, I'm not alone. My father will help me. He's brave and good and strong, with a heart of gold. I can't change the world's ways, maybe, but I can do something to make Belmont better with my father's help—and yours."

Gloria was a doughty Crusader, and was eager to plunge at once into the work of reform. She was going to permit her father to be a ways and means committee, but she intended to have a thorough grasp of the whole situation herself.

"Why do you pay this—this blackmail?" Gloria demanded.

"I've got to live. What else can I do—now? I'm down, an' in debt."

"But they can't keep you from living."

"They can send me to the workhouse." And at the thought Little Ella shuddered.

"Whom does this money go to? I want to get that part of it absolutely straight so I can tell father."

"It goes to the boss, of course."

Little Ella made this statement in a matter-of-fact manner. The methods of the "system" were so notorious that she did not have to think a moment before giving her answer.

The boss. Here was a factor in the game of which Gloria as yet had had no inkling. The boss. What does he do? Now she desired to know about this boss.

"The boss?" Both the tone of her question and the look on her face denoted her interrogation.

"Yes, the boss gets the money," Little Ella saw that it would be necessary for her to explain. "I thought everybody in Belmont knew that. I gives it to Noonan mostly, but sometimes the round-shouldered collector, an' sometimes they both do."

This double collection wasn't on the square, but what was she to do? If she complained, she knew too well what would happen to her.

"Who's Noonan?" He runs the saloon downstairs, an' rents me this room. He gets a rake-off from most everybody down here."

"He must be a rich man."

"Oh, some—but he's got to pass a lot of it on."

"And you say the police know about this?"

Little Ella looked at her in amazement. To Gloria a policeman was a stalwart individual with white gloves who halted traffic while she crossed the avenue. To the other a policeman was an enemy, a grafter who never overlooked an opportunity to feather his own nest or line his own pocket-book. The boss that she over could say for any one of them was that he was an autocratic rowdy. Gloria's simplicity in asking, if the police knew of this tribute caused her to reply:

"They ought to—they get some of it. Then the man higher up gets his."

"I can't believe it. When you get well I want you to come and tell my father all this. He is—he's an influential man. 'Im sure he'll help you. He shall help you," she added decisively, "and every poor, unhappy person down here, because I shall tell him to."

Little Ella looked at her, all admiration for such power.

"Gee! I wish I had a pa like yours," was all that she could say.

"No can't know that such things are happening—here—every day in Belmont."

"If he did, I reckon he wouldn't tell you," Little Ella was more conversant with the ways of the world.

"And what did you say finally becomes of this money you have to pay?"

"The boss gets it."

"Oh, yes. This boss—who is he? What does he do to earn his money?" "That's what he gets for perceiving us. He keeps the bulls from jugging us."

"And if you don't pay?"

lated in point of time. Yet in fact it told that her mind was intent upon one question: Who was the boss of Belmont?

"Kerr! Kerr! Old Dave Kerr," still rang in her ears. "The boss? Dave Kerr? I wonder what relation—"

The very ignominy of the thought restrained her. "No, no, no. It's all a mistake. It can't be—I couldn't believe it. There can't be any relation of my father's—my father's—It's absurd. It would be maddening, the suspicion of such a thing. Why, my father's the soul of honor."

Without warning, Joe Wright came into her mind; Joe Wright, her evil genius.

"What did the paper say? The king of underhand manipulators, David Kerr! The king!" she muttered aloud, and clapped her hand over her mouth at the word. The thought of such a thing widened her eyes with terror and set her heart to beating high with sudden fear. "But not this, O God! Not this!"

She repeated the pathetic words of Little Ella.

There's enough of us drops in Belmont to fill a pretty big bucket—oh, it can't be my father! It can't be my father!—He has a daughter—it's all a horrid mistake. There must be another David Kerr, I'm sure."

Gloria sprang from her chair and asked:

"Huh! He's the law in this town."

"Do you mean to tell me there is a man so base," demanded the daughter of David Kerr indignantly, "this boss, that spends his time collecting this money?"

Little Ella had come to realize soon after they had met that she was dealing with a meddling, hence she bore with her and answered her question patiently.

"Gosh! Little time he spends collecting money down here." Her tone indicated clearly that he spent no time at all. "What's the cops fer? What's Mike Noonan fer? He's got other things to do himself. I once knowed a young lawyer, an' he tol' me the boss got his from the big gambler houses, an' the street car company, an' the electric light company, an' big things like that."

"Then you're just a drop in the bucket." The magnitude of the "system" was just beginning to dawn on Gloria. She now saw that its ramifications were many, that there must be much that even this woman, for all her knowledge, could know little of. While she could not learn all from Little Ella, she could learn enough to make her father investigate.

"There's enough of us drops in Belmont to fill a pretty big bucket," the girl admitted. "Gimme a drink of water will you? I never was so dry at a Dutch picnic."

Gloria poured a glass of water for her. Then, feeling that she had not been considerate in asking the girl to tax her little strength by the recital of a story that sadly wasted her vital energy, she begged her to rest.

"You're still a bit feverish. Lie down now and rest. Try to go to sleep, and I'll sit here and read."

Soon her patient seemed to sleep, and Gloria picked up a book and tried to read. The revolution to which she had listened made all possibility of concentration upon the printed page out of the question. Suddenly it occurred to her that she did not know the boss' name. Just as this came into her mind, the girl turned restlessly and opened her eyes. Finding that she was awake, Gloria asked:

"Toll me, what's the name of the boss?"

"What? What?" Little Ella was not thoroughly awake.

"What's the name of the boss? I want to tell father."

"His name? Oh, it's Kerr. He's of Dave Kerr. Ever hear of him?"

Having roused herself sufficiently to answer the question, Little Ella sank again into a doze.

As for Gloria, it almost seemed that the words meant nothing to her at all. So slowly did her mind accept this intelligence that the fall of the book unnoticed to the floor did not seem remarkable.

What she beheld seemed to burn itself into her brain. On the cover of the program were the words: "Annual Ball. David Kerr Democratic Club," and the picture of her father. It was the truth; her father was the boss of Belmont. So different was her position from that of the man on which she had thought herself to be that the whole world would have to go through a revolutionary orientation. There was nothing in her life which would not have to be adjusted anew because of this revelation.

As she turned the pages of the program, pages filled with liquor and saloon advertisements, her thoughts were all of herself. Resentment and anger there were, directed toward her father, but now in the first moments when she saw herself as Belmont saw her humiliation conquered all other emotions. Her first thought of Joe Wright was that he had kept the truth from her. She could not grow more sick at heart, comparatively feeling was out of the question because she was completely crushed, but she saw as in a book that had been written and laid away as finished, the sacrifice he had made for her, the supreme renunciation he had made because he would not denounce her father before her.

The thought of how different her home-coming had been from what she had planned made her laugh hysterically. Then when she recalled the few staunch friends she had made, she clutched wildly at the hope that after all it was untrue.

"It's a lie, every word of it, a lie his enemies invent. What big man but has about him various weapons that prick and sting? Judge Gilbert, Mr. Kendall, Doctor Hayes, they'll all say that he—Joe Wright! What of him? What will he say?"

She put this man that had loved her in one balance and the other men in the other. He outweighed them all, the momentary hope was gone. She could see it all now. As the baffling attitude of Belmont revealed itself to her bit by bit she buried her face in her arms and sobbed.

"And I was so proud, oh, so proud!" moaned the daughter of David Kerr. "Joe! Joe! You did love me—I sent him away, and I never understood. Now I can see it all. The social slight—the cold disdain I could not understand—the whispers that died away before they reached my ears—all, all, all because I was David Kerr's daughter, David Kerr, the boss of Belmont."

Her father's name exercised a fascination over her. Again and again she repeated it, her lips curling with scorn.

Pimpily? Well Don't Be

People Notice It, Drive Them Off

With Olive Tablets.

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pimples will vanish after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Nothing ever cleansed the blood, the bowels and the liver like Olive Tablets. Olive Tablets are the only successful substitute for calomel—they oil the bowels; there's never any sickness or pain after taking them.

Olive Tablets do all that calomel does and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a dark brown brown taste, a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

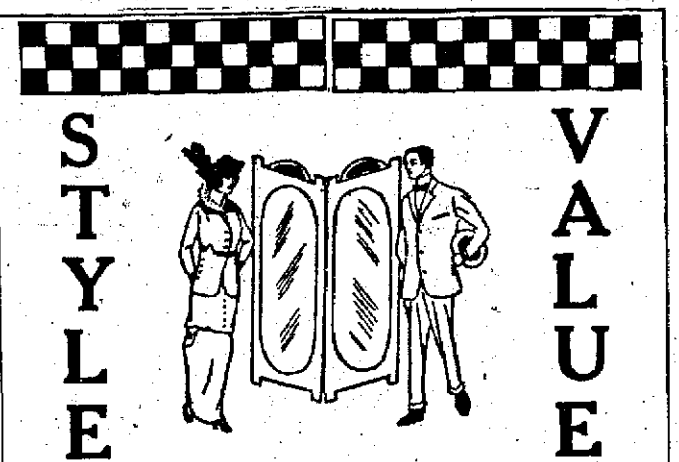

Olive Tablets are made of pure vegetable compounds mixed with olive oil.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result.

Try them. Take one nightly for a week, then look at yourself in the glass and see how you feel. Use 25c per box.

Garden in Hot Weather.

When hot weather visits us the fate of most gardens hangs in the balance. At this time, the garden needs our care more than at any other and we feel less like giving it the necessary care. The weather is hot and the air is still, and a hammock in a shady nook looks better to father than any "Man With the Hoe" tableau, especially after a hard day's work. Remember that the kind of weather that gives you a very tired feeling, makes the weeds grow rank and bold and dries the garden soil until it is almost water-proof.

Probably you feel that you don't need the exercise nearly as much as you did in the spring, and probably you are right; at the same time it will do you good if you take it properly, and you cannot afford to have the garden go to pieces just when a little work will pull it through in grand shape.

Get up half an hour earlier than usual and do your garden work then, instead of waiting until the tired evening or trying to jump it all into a week's end job. A little daily work in the cool of the early morning will send you to your regular bread-and-butter job feeling many times better than that little extra sleep would. Gone is that brown taste—gone the dead-alive feeling that the long stifling summer night brings.

Nature is at her loveliest while the dew is on and half the fun of gardening is getting close to nature. Do your gardening before you are tired out and enjoy it to the utmost.

We have previously told you what to do for the weeds, which, like the poor, are always with us. Unlike the poor, however, they need no assistance, but the strongest possible resistance, because they are altogether too well able to fend for themselves.

Cut off their heads, cut off their feet, burn their middles, and do it before they have any offspring. Then start in and do it all over again, because they resurrect mighty fast if given the slightest opportunity.

If the garden shows lack of moisture, it must be furnished, and the best way to do this is to irrigate at night. This is better than sprinkling, because the water soaks in deeper and evaporation is much less at night than in the daytime. A thorough soaking once a week is plenty and the soil should be cultivated the next morning to hold the water.

This, then, is the time when a soil full of manure is appreciated. It holds more water and does not bake.

English Polo Team Plans Active Practice Here Before Big Match; Americans Are in Tiptop Form.

NEW YORK, May 9.—When the members of the star English polo team sailed for this country preparations were made here to give them a cordial welcome. Their arrival a month before the match for the international cup is to be played at Meadowbrook on June 10 meant that the challenges would be given every opportunity to practice in their new surroundings before the contest began. Their ponies had already been shipped. The regular members of the team as finally settled are Vivian Lockett, Leslie St. Claire Cheape, Noel Edwards and R. G. Ritson. Captain Lockett took the place of Buckmaster, who was injured. The American team is reported in splendid condition and ready to defend the cup. The makeup in the same as last year—namely, Larry Waterbury, Whitney, Monte Waterbury and Devereux Mithun.

STEEL MEN WAITING TO SEE HOW LOW PIG IRON WILL GO

But Orders Will Probably Be Placed Soon Which Will Stimulate Trade Generally.

NEW YORK, May 7.—The American Metal Market and Daily Iron & Steel Report will say tomorrow: "Recent declines in pig iron have clearly brought the market to a stage which promises real action, either by buyers taking hold to an extent sufficient to cause a reaction, or by forces going out of blast. The activity in the steel industry proper is reflected by the pig iron situation, stocks having increased in the South, in Virginia and in the West, whereas in the Pittsburgh Valley district they have decreased. While the price declines in Bessemer and basic iron have been small relative to the declines in foundry iron.

"New low prices on foundry iron have been made in the Pittsburgh district and the attention of the foundry iron trade is now centered on the Westinghouse Electric Company inquiry which may be acted on next week, for second half requirements. If it does not under negotiation is consummated fresh light may be thrown on the Bessemer pig iron market.

"Rumors of shutting in Lake Superior ore prices are not generally accepted by the trade, but naturally, though it is admitted that such a thing could occur.

"The coke market instead of clearing up becomes less clear, as the coke interests are waiting on pig iron and the pig iron interests are waiting on coke.

"Some of the scrap markets have suddenly weakened further, and heavy melting steel could easily be picked up at 4 1/2, delivered Pittsburgh, and probably at less.

"Finished steel prices are held with remarkable steadiness, there being no shading at all in the majority of fundamental lines, and indeed no marked shading except in galvanized sheets, which probably reflects the two-cent decline in spelter.

"While the mills really have the large volume of finished steel specifications reported from time to time, the pressure has decreased so that they can sandwich in some early deliveries in nearly all products.

"Production continues at substantially the maximum rate all along the line."

WILD WEST SHOW COMING

Wyoming Bill's Wild West Exhibition to be Here May 16.

There is probably no greater educational institution or amusement entertainment in the entire world today than the Wyoming Bill's Wild West Show. With this immense aggregation are the most noted, celebrated and renowned scouts, cowboys, trappers, Indians and guides identified with early frontier life. They have each and every one experienced the hardships of early pioneer days, and are this season portraying to the American public in a decidedly realistic manner the trials and tribulations that it was necessary to experience in the far West during the time the Red Man reigned supreme. This portion of Wyoming Bill's Wild West performance is an educator for old and young alike, as well as an entertaining and amusing, and furnishes only a part of the elegant performance. In addition will be found Gossacks from Russia, Gossacks from South America, Arabs from the desert, and an abundance of brightly-colored Senecas and dashing, daring, rosy-cheeked Western beauties, led by the famous queen of the saddle, Mabelle Deer, the most expert horsewoman the world has ever known. It is truly a picture of life on the great Western plains—hunting, jassing, bull-dogging, riding

"It Saves Me So Much Time and Hard Work"

That's the very first thing a woman who has a McDougall Cabinet will say—and it does, too—says hundreds of steps and two to four hours of hard work each day it is used.

The McDougall Cabinet combines the pantry, cupboard and kitchen table in one—cuts out trips from one to the other and makes kitchen work a pleasure.

McDougall Kitchen Cabinets are the standard by which all other are judged. They are by far the most durable, have many more conveniences and labor-saving devices, and yet they cost no more than vastly inferior kinds.

If you value your time as being worth anything at all, you should get a McDougall at once. Come in and let us show you how convenient they are.
